

Choosing the Right Care

If you have a medical emergency, the Emergency Room (ER) is the place to go. But in many cases, you'll save time and money by choosing the right place to get care. When you can't get in to see your primary care doctor, consider these other options for help when—and where—you need it.

ST. LUKE'S NURSE LINE

A phone call could save you money—and an emergency room visit. Instead of relying on the internet for self-diagnosis, you can pick up the phone and talk to a registered nurse any time. This new 24/7 service is available through St. Luke's nurse line, which is staffed by registered nurses. St. Luke's nurse line is free and can help you make sense of your symptoms and determine how and where to get the best care.

All you need is your phone. Call 844-265-7648.

URGENT CARE

They're open late in some locations and are a great choice for sore throats, broken bones, sprains, headaches, stomachaches, earaches, and other urgent medical conditions.

With locations throughout Idaho, there's a site near you. Visit stlukesonline.org or use our mobile app to find the nearest facility.

Urgent care costs about the same as care received at a doctor's office, which is much cheaper than the ER
